Spring 2007

Students adjust during construction project

Amy Busted Blaser
Class of 1988

As the graduating class of 2007 nears the completion of their high school careers, students reflect and share insights, experiences and opinions following completion of the high school construction project which spanned a period of June 2004 through November 2006.

Shayna Janssen – Class of 2007

“Construction in the fall of 2006 was distracting – especially when you were taking tests. Over time, I got used to the noise. Now that the construction project is complete, I think the whole school looks a lot nicer. It took a lot longer than people were anticipating, but now that it is done, it is wonderful! In my opinion, the greatest improvement to the school is the cafeteria; it is nicer, bigger, and a lot more modern. Additionally, the IMC (media center) is bigger and more modern.”

Josh Korth – Class of 2007

“I was at school during the summer of 2006 for football practice. Slowly things were starting to get done, and you could tell it was going to look nice. In the fall, you learned to ignore the drilling and dust. The construction began during my sophomore year and spanned a period of approximately two years. The gym floor still needs refinishing. It does not look very good. I’m just glad the construction project is done. It is so much cleaner. When something looks cleaner, it makes you want to be there. The greatest improvement is the IMC (media center) and cafeteria. Both are a lot more spacious.”

Kyle Luckey – Class of 2007

“The construction project was not a personal distraction. It really was not that much of a change for me. The overall appearance is great – bigger bathrooms, the hallways definitely look more up-to-date and modern. For some students, the construction project was very chaotic but for me it was not.”

Patrick Siemek – Class of 2007

“During the construction project there was a lot of drilling, cutting and dust in the air. At times the hallways were blocked due to the construction, so students were required to travel different routes. Now that construction is complete, the greatest improvement has been in the cafeteria area and no more leaky ceilings! The cafeteria is open and looks like a cafeteria you would find in a really, really nice place (such as) in a school in a larger city. The completion of the construction project has improved employee morale. No construction distractions, no more leaky ceilings – it has created a sound, stable environment. You can definitely concentrate more. The school is a lot different than it was. A great improvement for future students to enjoy!”

Jess Thompson – Class of 2007

“The teachers and administration should be praised for the way in which they dealt with the construction. They found ways to accommodate their teaching methods in a dirty and dusty environment. I did not feel I was ever personally in danger during the project. Administration set a due date for the completion of the project, and in the end, the date the project was complete was really close to their goal. I know that was difficult to predict. Overall, the completion of the construction project will put our school back on top and reinstate school pride – a much better environment in which to learn. I thought the contractors did a really great job!”

Class of 1956 donates chimes to CMS

Once again, bells will be ringing at the Columbus Middle School band concerts.

The Class of 1956 made this possible with a donation, which enabled the band department to purchase a new set of chimes. The previous chimes, which were between 18 and 20 years old, fell apart.

“(CMS Principal Doug Kluth) sat down in the front row to observe my class,” Band Director Jeff Peabody said. “The first song we played, we hit the lowest chime, and it fell off and landed in front of Mr. Kluth.”

Peabody said he would not have been able to afford to buy the chimes for several years because many other instruments had to be replaced first.

He said the chimes he purchased were top-of-the-line, and he received a good deal because a friend of his works for Taylor Music in South Dakota. Peabody said the listing price for the chimes was $7,000 and he got them for about half price.

The Adams Chimes are an inch and a half in diameter and are chrome.

“They are slightly bigger, so they have a much fuller sound,” Peabody said.

He said it was not hard to immediately notice the better quality.

“The sound is remarkably different,” Peabody said. “We couldn’t believe it the first time we heard it (how much better it sounded).”

In the past, there were not many songs written for chimes because many schools did not have this instrument, he said. However, this is not the case now.

At his performances, the chimes are used for several songs.

“We are really thankful to get these,” he said about the donation.

Winter Sports Round-Up

Bob Markham
Class of 1976

The wrestling team’s sixth place finish at the state tournament was one of many highlights for CHS sports this past winter. Austin Carmichael took the championship at 140 pounds. Louie Rambour (112 pounds) and Evan Bohnet (215 pounds) both placed second with Brandon Wilbur-Sohl (285 pounds) taking fourth. The grapplers qualified nine wrestlers including Hector Maya, Jacob Kloppel, Zach Ridgeway, Seth Ziemba and Michael Ziola. Six state qualifiers return to lead coach Rick Benson’s squad next season.

The swim teams coached by Jan Boeding had an up and down season with senior Jared Sharman returning from a near season ending injury to qualify for the state meet in the 100 yard freestyle and backstroke events. The Discoverers’ other state qualifiers included Anna Boeding in the 100 yard freestyle and she joined teammates Kristin Jacobson, Taylour Kumpf and Mary Boeding for the 200 yard and 400 yard freestyle events.

The Girls basketball team led by coach Dave Licari posted a school best 18-5 record. A 49-47 loss to rival Grand Island ended the girls’ season with them narrowly missing a wild card berth to the state tournament.

The Discoverers were led by seniors Jodie Boss, Erica Soltero, Jordan Loschen, Leah Travnicek, Stephanie Powell, Lindsey Shannon, Caitlin Ludden, Brooke Sjuts and Laura Groteluschen. Alexi Boettcher returns to lead a young but talented team next season.

The CHS boys posted a 4-17 record that included 8 losses by five points or less. The Discoverers’ season ended with a 47-39 loss to Kearney in district competition. They were led by Seniors Jason Schlautman, Trevor Wilke, Dan Kramer and Dwight Coulter. Dustin Groteluschen, Brian Cleary and Kurt Farmer return to lead a team that will sport a new coach next season.

Jazz band takes trip to Chicago

A trip to Chicago turned out to not only be fun but also a learning experience for the Columbus High School Jazz Band members.

Over spring break, 18 students saw the Blue Man Group, watched a Bulls game, toured the city, performed at an elementary school and spent time with a professor at DePaul University.

“This is the type of stuff they remember in 10 or 15 years,” CHS band instructor Marty Antholz said.

He said the trip served a dual purpose – to help the students improve in jazz and also be a reward for all their hard work.

“We worked with a professor (from DePaul University) for a couple of hours,” Antholz said. “He said some nice things about our group and helped us a lot.”

Senior Nathan Mueller said the clinic with the professor was helpful in showing the group how to improve.

“He taught us a lot about blending and style,” the trombone player said. “He also showed us how to set up a band and where everyone should sit.”

Senior Andrew Nitz said the professor offered tips to improve their sound.

Mueller said he also enjoyed the opportunity to play at the elementary school.

“It is always fun to play in a different environment,” he said. “It makes you want to perform better when you are playing for someone you don’t know.”

Drummer Derek Pasonault

said he learned to exaggerate the sound and yet to play more simple. He said playing jazz is just fun.

“It is a different type of style,” Pasonault said.

Nitz also enjoys jazz because of its unique style, and since he plays several instruments, this gives him more flexibility.

“You get to do a lot of improvising,” he said.

Schaefer finishes term as president

Jim Schaefer
Class of 1970

When 2003 Columbus High School graduate Matt Schaefer stepped on the University of Nebraska-Lincoln campus for the first time, little did he know that in three years he would be the first student from CHS or Columbus to be the student body president.

Schaefer said he has always been interested in politics, but his interest really took off when he went to Washington D.C. with a group of CHS students as part of a Close Up trip. The purpose of the trip was to learn how government really works. Schaefer recalled after that trip, he attended Boy’s State and has been hooked on politics ever since.

Earlier in high school he was interested in going into engineering, but after Washington D.C. and Boy’s State, he changed his major to Political Science.

Once at UNL, Schaefer had a roommate who was very active in local and state politics.

Bob Hopp, who has coached the maroon and white boys for the last 13 years, resigned at the end of the season.

Dave Hiebner has been named the new head boys basketball coach. He will join the social studies department as a history and government teacher at CHS.

Hiebner has taught social studies and served as the school guidance counselor at Centennial Public Schools for the past three years, as well as the head boys' basketball coach. During his time at Centennial, his teams were Southern NE Conference (Eastern) Regular Season Champions, 2005-06; Malcolm Holiday Tournament Champions 2004-05; Sub-district Champion 2006-07; District

Runner-up 2006-07.

He has previously taught and coached at Harvard Public Schools and was assistant basketball coach at Bethel College.

CHS staff members interviewed eight candidates.

Schaefer ends term as president

This person got him involved in several elections.

Later, Schaefer ran for Student Senate and won.

The next year, Schaefer and his friends, went after David Hergert, a Board of Regent from out west who used questionable and illegal campaign tactics to win his seat. Schaefer and his friends led the charge to get Hergert kicked off the board, which he ultimately was after the State Supreme Court convicted him of charges the legislature had impeached him on.

Schaefer later that year set up a party called N Power to run for student government elections. In the spring of 2006, that party had 54 of 55 candidates win the spot they were seeking. Schaefer won a three-way race for student body president. He attributes his success to the hard work of his party members and from the lessons he learned from working on several campaigns on the national and state levels.

Schaefer said this was the first major election campaign that he worked on that he had won. He campaigned on eliminating the sales tax on college textbooks and building a new multicultural center on campus.

In office, Schaefer was able to introduce a bill in the Nebraska Legislature to eliminate sales tax on textbooks, but the bill was languished in the Revenue Committee. However, he was pleased that his efforts on the multicultural center were fruitful and building will begin soon.

As student body president, Schaefer was also a member of the Board of Regents. Although a non-voting member, Schaefer's job was to give a voice to the 22,000 students he representing at UNL. He said his one-year on the board was very interested because of the people he met. Schaefer met national political figures such as Sen. Ben Nelson, Sen. Chuck Hagel, Karl Rove and Supreme Court Judge Ruth Bader Ginsburg. Locally, he met most of the state's senators and the governor.

Schaefer said it was exciting to see how the Regents approved funding for new building plans for several campuses. He cited the Nursing College that will be built in Norfolk as one of many projects the Regents approved.

Schaefer was also present when the turmoil at the University of Nebraska at Omaha was discussed, which led to the resignation of several officials including the chancellor. While a student regent, he was deeply involved in fighting and defeating Initiative 423, which would have had dire effects on the university.

Another benefit to being student body president was visiting new places. He was invited to Israel last summer, but was forced to abort his plans until Christmas due to fighting in the area. Schaefer said he really enjoyed his trip to Israel. He was also invited to Washington D.C. where he toured the White House.

Schaefer's one-year term ended this spring. He will graduate in May and be attending law school in the fall. Schaefer plans to pursue a career in public policy or public service when he graduates.
